In the early days, 5-year-old Clint Jolly followed his dad around the family's northern Nevada butcher shop, angling for choice cuts and a turn with the knives. At 13, Clint was preparing dishes for customers, and gaining the hands-on entrepreneurial experience that eventually would grow the family business into a $10 million empire.

Now, Clint has taken his insatiable curiosity and sense of culinary adventure on the road, in an epic journey to learn why we eat the way we do. "The world provides," he says. "Every culture has a food story, and every person who prepares it tells their story through the food."

Chef Clint is dedicated to mentoring Carson High School culinary students. Under his tutelage, Carson High has won five first place victories in the state's National Restaurant Association Educational Foundation's ProStart Invitational™ restaurant management and culinary arts competition, and taken second nationally.
